At a time when the Higher Education sector faces considerable change and uncertainty, York St John University can draw on a proud history of innovating and modernising to meet contemporary needs and challenges.

As the oldest Higher Education institution in the city, our roots go back to 1841. Originally the York Diocesan Training School for teacher education, we opened in May that year with just one student, whose descendants are still in contact with the University today! In 1846 the Female Teacher Training School was also founded and ever since then our mission to widen access to education has been at the heart of everything we do.

After expanding our range of courses over many years, York St John achieved full University status in 2006, with Research Degree Awarding Powers following in 2015. Now, as the sector responds to new business models, regulations and expectations, we are adapting again. This means building on our strong suite of undergraduate courses with enhanced Postgraduate provision, new relationships with international and domestic education partners and the identification of new income streams and teaching opportunities that build on our significant reputation for supporting continuous professional development.

Alongside this external focus, we're creating the conditions on our campus where you can really achieve. We have invested significantly in new teaching space and facilities, including new laboratories, media studios and a major new sports park development just a short walk from our main campus. The combination of old and new architecture, alongside green space and views from many offices of both the city walls and iconic York Minster, makes York St John University an attractive and energising place to work. We are also a consistent Gold Award winner at the annual Yorkshire in Bloom competition. The University has a clear governance structure and a governing body of experienced members who act as positive advocates for the institution's staff and students. Our current Chancellor is the Archbishop of York, John Sentamu. The University's proud position at the heart of the city is perhaps best celebrated and symbolised each year at Graduation, which takes place over three days during November within world famous York Minster.

"I feel very proud to be part of the team at York St John University. From doing a Masters and PhD supervised here I have developed to become a longstanding member of the Academic community. The University has given me a strong foundation to grow professionally through both training and the support of my peers. We take a modern, outward looking approach which helps us offer high quality teaching to students."

ACHIEVE YOUR AMBITIONS

When you join York St John University, you invest your expertise in us and likewise we recognise the value of investing our efforts and expertise in you.

So we offer a wide-ranging package of training and professional advancement opportunities that mean you and your manager can tailor development to you.

Your success at work starts with your wellbeing. Since 2015 we have been a signatory to the Mindful Employer Charter, reflecting our positive approach to mental health and wellbeing in the workplace. We are also accredited as a Disability Confident Employer in 2017. York St John was also a partner to Stonewall when it launched its Trans Allies initiative. A strong sense of community across our campus is reflected in the networks of mutual support that exist between our teams. All staff will receive an annual Performance Development Review (PDR), with our online system ensuring that objectives can be recorded, monitored and acted upon consistently across the University. Dedicated training and development budgets within teams mean that your manager can work with you to put practical steps in place following your review.

Everyone at York St John University has the opportunity to pursue professional growth and promotion. A number of leadership programmes, accredited by the Chartered Management Institute, are available and funded by the University. For those already in leadership roles an “Extended Leadership Team” network meets regularly to help the University develop its strategic direction and priority projects as well as providing an excellent networking opportunity with peers.

Having appointed over 60 new academic staff in the past two years, the University is embracing the opportunity to learn from fresh ideas. Amongst Academic staff we have a strong record of enhancing career advancement. 90% of our Academic staff have achieve Higher Education Academy fellowship, putting us amongst the leading universities in the country for the proportion of Academics with a recognised teaching qualification. We have many examples of staff from different background who have been supported in achieving promotion from Lecturer to Senior Lecturer and from Associate Professor to Professor.

We support and promote a number of programmes and initiatives targeted to those who are underrepresented in Higher Education leadership roles. This includes funding for the Leadership Foundation’s Diversifying Leadership Programme, which support early career academics and professional services staff from black and minority ethnic (BAME) backgrounds who are about to take their first steps into a leadership role, and for Aurora, the Foundation’s women-only leadership programme. Through the Northern Universities consortium we also support dedicated action learning sets for female staff.

The University has a well-established mentoring scheme, with all new starters allocated an internal mentor, as well as being part of the Research mentoring and Yorkshire Accord mentoring programmes.

“I was attracted to York St John University by the strong sense of community and the ambition it has for students. There is a genuine commitment to widening access, raising aspirations and increasing opportunities through the power of education. The collective focus on impactful research reflects our desire to apply academic excellence and rigour to areas where we can really make a difference”.

AN ENVIRONMENT TO THRIVE IN

We believe that being happy in the work you do is one of the most fundamental ways to bring out the best in your teaching, research and wider contribution to our University. We work proactively to create an environment that feels friendly, inclusive and supportive for all our staff, as well as our students.

We are proud to be the holder of a number of awards that demonstrate this commitment. We have been listed amongst the UK’s most inclusive employers by LGBTQ charity Stonewall for a number of years and climbed to 24th in their overall ranking in 2018, helped by the development of our new trans-framework and a thriving LGBTQ staff network that play a proactive role not just in University life, but in the cultural vibrancy of the whole city.

We also hold the Social Enterprise Gold Mark in recognition of the socially responsible way we work and contribute. For example, many of our staff have supported the award winning Converge initiative – a partnership with the NHS through which the University offers free courses and training to mental health service users from the local community. Over the past ten years more than 1000 people have benefitted. In addition, we are part of York Cares, a city-based, independent volunteering charity through which businesses, communities and employees come together to make York a better place. We work with other local organisations to offer support to particularly vulnerable groups, including refugees and care leavers.

The University celebrates the diversity of its workforce and is actively seeking to increase that diversity further. We have a number of strong staff network groups that ensure colleagues from different backgrounds can come together in a spirit of mutual support. We run a range of events each year to mark key events in the calendar, such as Black History Month. We also have arrangements in place through our Chaplaincy to support staff and students of all faiths and those of none.

Staff at all levels are active in shaping the University’s policies and direction. For example, a recent review of the University’s values engaged more than 150 staff.

BENEFITS

Our commitment to our staff is demonstrated in an extensive suite of benefits and support that includes:

- Excellent annual leave alongside flexible working to create a family-friendly working culture.
- Well-established staff pension provision run through the North Yorkshire Pension Fund and the Teacher’s Pension Scheme.
- An Employee Assistance Programme for confidential help and support during difficult times, provided by qualified experts.
- A Health Cash Plan, available after a qualifying period of service, entitling staff members to a range of discounts and support in relation their own healthcare and in certain cases, that of family members.
- A significant number of staff discounts and benefits relating to shops and services outside the University, accessible through the free YSJ You staff benefits scheme.
- Support for a healthy lifestyle through YSJ Active – giving access to fitness facilities and health opportunities, plus a well-used cycle to work scheme.
- Extensive training on issues of personal as well as professional development.
A CITY TO CELEBRATE

Not only is the city one of most popular tourist destinations in the U.K, thanks to its range of history, culture and year-round entertainment – it is also regularly highlighted as one of the best places to live thanks to the quality of its schools, safety record, community spirit and thriving arts scene.

As York St John University is located just a stone’s throw from the city walls, our staff are ideally placed to get immersed in everything York has to offer and build new networks and professional relationships. We actively support or sponsor many of the key events in York’s cultural calendar including the BAFTA qualifying Aesthetica Short Film Festival, the York Literature Festival, Illuminating York – the city’s festival of lights and the Festival of Ideas. York’s status as the UK’s first UNESCO city of Media Arts reflects our thriving creative scene, which is brought to life across the city’s several theatres, cinemas, galleries, creative spaces, music venues and independent shops.

The University’s location in the centre of the city makes it easier to get to, however you prefer to travel. Many of our staff walk or cycle to work and for those coming from further afield we are less than a fifteen minute walk from York train station itself. Bus routes from around the city, including Park and Ride services come past, or very near to the University. Parking is also available near to our campus.

Knowing that you can achieve a positive work-life balance is an important consideration for any new role, as is thinking about where you’ll live and how you’ll travel to and from work. Against each of these criteria, York ticks all the boxes!

The city’s wider transport connections are excellent, with more than 70 trains per day during the week to London, a journey that takes just over 2 hours, plus very regular trains to Leeds (25 minutes away) Manchester and Manchester Airport (80 and 105 minutes respectively) and Edinburgh. Leeds Bradford airport is also less than an hour away.

For staff moving to the city, relocation support is available to certain roles.

York is the largest city in North Yorkshire – the largest county in England. This means that the Yorkshire Moors are on our doorstep, the Yorkshire coast is less than an hour away and we are just a short way from a variety of picturesque towns and villages, each with their own unique charm and history. The region has the highest levels of employment in the north of England and one of the most highly skilled workforces.

The University has strong links and partnerships across the region, including a leading role in work to widen participation in Higher Education. We are increasingly looking at our regional footprint, establishing York St John as a major influence on North Yorkshire’s social, economic and cultural evolution.
